BOOKS:

Undead: (Inter)(in)animation, Feminisms, and the Art of War (forthcoming, University of California Press, Feminist Media Series/Luminos, paperback and open-access Platform, Spring 2025). Undead explores artists' use of relational, intermedial, and sometimes paradoxically static forms of animation to respond to "war," a term that is questioned and expansively understood. Artists and filmmakers considered include: Yael Bartana, Nancy Davenport, Kelly Dolak, Gesiye, Mariam Ghani, David Hart, Helen Hill, Onyeka Igwe, Mary Reid Kelley and Patrick Kelley, Florestine Kinchen, Maryam Mohajer, Ibrahim Nasrallah, and Wazhmah Osman.

Deep Mediations: Thinking Space in Cinema and Digital Cultures, eds. Karen Redrobe and Jeffrey Scheible (University of Minnesota Press, March 2021), 385 pages. Winner of the Society of Cinema and Media Studies Best Edited Book Award (2022). This volume explores the visual, sonic, philosophical, psychoanalytic, cognitive, digital, racial, and spatial aspects of the concept of “depth” as it has been emerging recently within the discourse of Cinema and Media Studies. Authors: Laurel Ahnert, Erika Balsom, Brooke Belisle, Jinhee Choi, Jennifer Fay, Lisa Han, Jean Ma, Shaka McGlotten, Susanna Paasonen, Jussi Parikka, Pooja Rangan, Alessandra Raengo, Karen Redrobe, Katherine Rochester, Jeffrey Scheible, Karl Schoonover, Jordan Schonig, John Paul Stadler, Nicole Starosielski, Arnold Taylor, and Laura Tilton Animating Film Theory, ed. Karen Redrobe (Duke UP, March 2014, Reprinted 2015), 376 pages. This edited volume asks whether film theorists have neglected animation as a primary concern or whether writing on animation has simply been excluded from academic film theory anthologies; and if so, why? The seventeen essays collected here uncover film theory’s long and international history of engagement with the phenomenon of movement, explore when “cinema” came to be considered as “live action cinema,” and reflect on what earlier writings on animation have to offer our own moment of transition within the realm of moving images.

On Writing With Photography ed. Karen Redrobe and Liliane Weissberg (U of Minnesota P, 2013). This co-edited volume explores what happens to texts—and images—when they are brought together, addressing a wide range of genres and media, including graphic novels, children’s books, photo-essays, films, and photographers—past and present—have served as powerful creative resources for each other.

Crash: Cinema and the Politics of Speed and Stasis (Duke UP, August 2010), 305 pages. This book takes cinematic, photographic, and literary depictions of car crashes and traffic jams as the starting point for an inquiry into contemporary discussions of medium specificity, aesthetic and social hybridity, interdisciplinarity, speed, stasis, and mobility. Texts include: industrial safety films, How It Feels to Be Run Over, Two Tars, Hot Water, Weekend, J.G. Ballard’s Crash, Andy Warhol’s film Since, Bruce Conner’s Report and Alejandro González Iñárritu’s Amores Perros.

Still Moving: Between Cinema and Photography, eds. Karen Redrobe and Jean Ma (Duke UP, 2008). 312 pages. This co-edited volume stages a conversation between artists and academics in the fields of art history, film studies, literature and photography about the space between cinema and photography. Addressing issues of indexicality, medium specificity, movement, stasis, and media hybridity, the book examines how these modern media have developed and defined themselves, and continue to do so, through, and against, each other. Contributors include: Tom Gunning, Atom Egoyan, Rebecca Baron, George Baker, Raymond Bellour, Nancy Davenport, Timothy Corrigan, Juan Suarez, and Rita González.

Vanishing Women: Magic, Film, and Feminism (Duke UP, 2003). 239 pages.

This book uncovers a pattern of female vanishings in nineteenth and twentieth century visual culture, and argues, through a series of close readings, that vanishing women repeatedly emerge at different historical moments in response to anxieties about female excess. Written at a moment when feminist film theorists' positions on female spectatorship and spectacle were undergoing fundamental transitions, the book asks: Is vanishing a particularly female affair, and why? What makes a human body socially visible or invisible, and how does vanishing differ from invisibility? What is the relationship between real and metaphorical disappearance? And finally, what are the ethics of witnessing the spectacle of vanishing, and how can we, as observers, become more vigilant? By tracing the vanishing woman's elusive emergence in stage magic, spiritualist photography, psychoanalysis, and film, I argue that we can begin to think differently about both female subjectivity and what it reveals about the media in which the female subject appears.
